

KC Bicycle Master Plan Seeks Community Input in Northland on April 27.

The push to develop a comprehensive bicycle master plan is moving ahead and City officials want to collect as much public feedback as possible for what promises to be a much-improved Bike KC. The City already is leveraging $2.3 million in federal transportation funds with local capital improvement funds for several on-street bike facilities slated for 2017 and 2018 construction. More at: <http://kcmo.gov/publicworks/bikekc/projects/>

City planners are inviting citizens to attend at least one of four public meetings to discuss the new plan and offer suggestions to make it better. There will be a meeting in KC North on Thursday, April 27 from 6-8 p.m. at the Northland Cathedral, 101 NW 99th St. For the full schedule of meetings, go to: <http://kcmo.gov/news/2017/kcmo-bicycle-master-plan-meetings-set-to-start-april-18/>